AXIAN TELECOM LAUNCH US$ 420 MILLION DEBUT BOND

AXIAN Telecom, a leading pan-African provider of telecommunications, mobile money services and digital infrastructure has successfully priced its US$420 million Senior Notes, due in 2027.

The successful pricing of the bond, which launched yesterday on Wednesday 9th February 2022, was supported by anchor orders from development finance institutions CDC, DEG, EAIF and IFC. From initial price thoughts of "high 7s"the transaction priced at 7.375%, being a successful outcome for a debut African issuer compared to peers, especially in a context of recent market volatility. The order book was eventually 2.2x oversubscribed with half investors from the US. The funds raised are intended to finance the repayment of certain existing debts, as well as general corporate purposes to support AXIAN Telecom growth.

This achievement paves the way for other African champions to tap international Debt Capital Markets, in order to mobilize investments that will benefit the continent and its people. By Africans, for Africans.

J.P. Morgan, Standard Bank and Société Générale, acted as Global coordinators, Latham & Watkins as issuer counsel and White & Case as bank counsel.

This success transaction reflects AXIAN Telecom's resilient and diversified business model, based on mobile & fixed, infrastructure and digital operations. This financing will support our vision to serve and impact positively the populations in our country of operations, accelerating digital transformation and inclusion.
